

Trinity Samaniego
Creative Coding
1/18/2021

Mindset

My results from the test was that I had a strong growth mindset. This was something that was not surprising since I have been told that I have an open mind towards things. Whether that be people or trying to learn things I try to come at things with a clear mind. There is always something that can be learned from the weirdest places. I remember learning about how to play billiards and dominos at a gas station when I was younger.

I think these won't really change my outlook on things in life. I always like trying or learning new things. Not to mention I always try to give people a chance even if we don't agree on something. It's just how I have always been.